

The Forbes logo is displayed in a white, serif font against a solid black rectangular background.

1,248 views | Sep 8, 2020, 07:10am EDT

Hopeful Hoteliers: 35 Exciting New Hotel Openings Around The World For Fall 2020

Ramsey Qubein

Contributor

Travel

As fall approaches, there is a sliver of good news in the travel industry as many hotels continue their plans to open across the country and around the world. While it may seem like an inopportune time, costs to slow or stop construction altogether can be greater than those of moving forward (even if hotels operate at limited capacity).

Many hotels opening now began work more than a year ago, and they were close to opening when Covid-19 hit. In addition to supporting local jobs, it can make sense for them to open now in hopes they can attract some business.

According to a recent recovery insight study by Mastercard, smaller, independent hotels are recovering faster than larger properties. Its data, based on anonymized and aggregated sales activity across its sales network, show that the global recovery rate of small independent hotels is outpacing that of larger hotels by over 50 percent with a similar, yet smaller upward trajectory, taking place domestically. It also notes a growing trend in regional travel with people traveling to destinations closer to home.

Hotels and airlines are encouraging cautious travel through bonus point promotions since they know loyalty programs drive business. That's in addition to the numerous precautions they are taking to assure travelers that it is safe to stay with them. This summer, dozens of new hotels opened their doors, and more are on the way.

Whether you are looking for a complete hotel buyout for maximum privacy or some Instagram-worthy places to stay, these are some of the newest hotels to open around the world this fall.

A suite at Florence's new IL Tornabuoni Hotel

IL TORNABUONI HOTEL

In Europe, Florence, Italy is getting a new luxury hotel with the November opening of IL Tornabuoni. The 62-room hotel on Via Tornabuoni is in the historic 12th century Palazzo Minerbetti, which is one of the city's oldest palazzo residences. A rooftop restaurant overlooking Santa Maria Novella and the city's famous skyline and a champagne bar are expected to be highlights.